consideration each person living in Detroit was granted a real estate holding following the disastrous fire of 1805, in which the then thriving little city virtually was destroyed.

If Mary Watson Hudson could return here in the year 1925—street cars, motor cars and perhaps an airplane overhead might be quite too much for her—but she would have one remaining gasp of astonishment for the moment when she first glimpsed the structure which now towers above every other building in Detroit.

Upon the same site which she obtained for a cent has been built the 14-million-dollar Book-Cadillac hotel, the tallest hotel in the world, and with the largest number of rooms of any hotel outside of New York.

For eighty-eight years a hotel has stood upon this spot at the juncture of Michigan street and Washington boulevard. A modest structure with accommodations for twenty guests was the first hotel. The low Book-Cadillac hotel has twelve hundred rooms, each with bath.

Ten years after the lot was first bought for a cent, it was purchased by a speculator for $150.

Mr. Shandy intends redecorating the entire exterior of the building at that site, as well as redecorating the interior of his drug store, and a new front is also to be installed, it is understood.

The decision to improve the property follows the leasing of the two west rooms of the structure by the Interstate Salvage company, an army store, recently. The Interstate company, which now occupies the west room of the structure, has taken a ten year lease on both rooms and will throw the two together, enlarging their present store space by an amount equal to that which they have at the present time.

BUYS HOME SITE.

Keith Owens, manager of Davis Gardens, has purchased an eight-acre home-site tract in Allandale and plans to make his future home in that beautiful section.

Mr. Owens will not build immediately. It is understood but plans to go ahead with the landscaping of his property at an early date preparatory to the construction of his home.

terrace and two-car garage, which follows the same lines as the house itself.

The new home is being built by Waterman and Williams for Mr. Brashers. Ed Shaw has the general contract, Hartman and company have the heating, Kwoczalla the plumbing, and Sunbeam Electric company the electrical work.

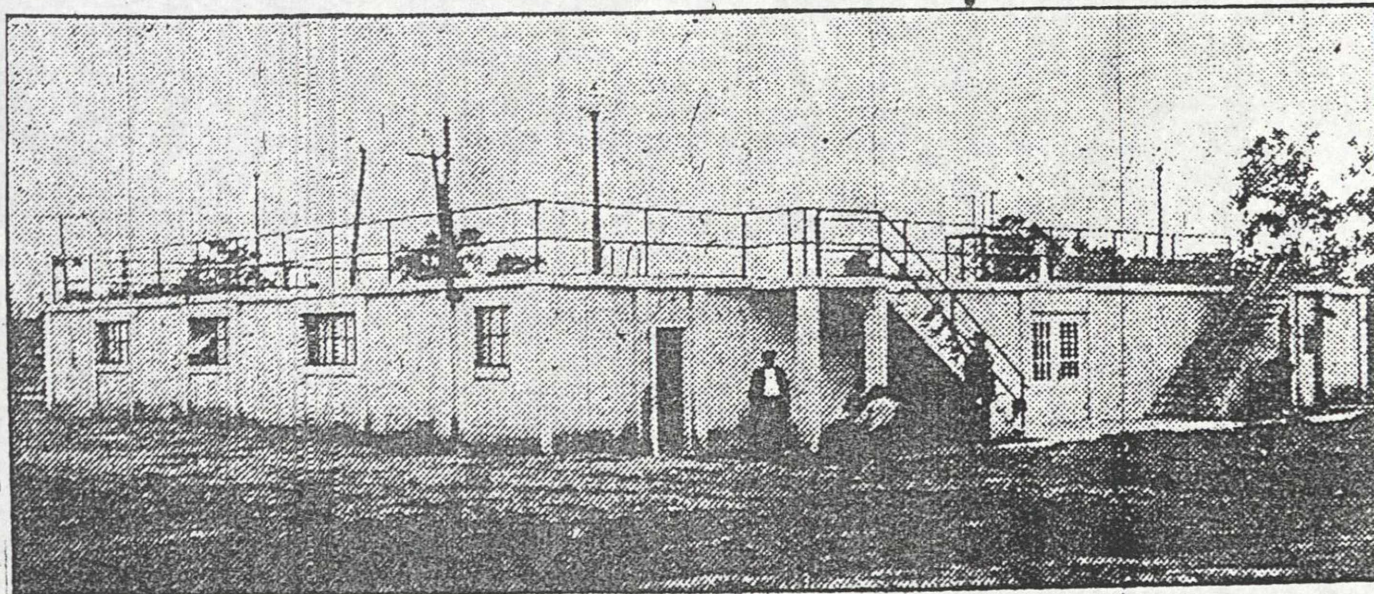

BENNINGTON BUYS.

William C. Bennington has purchased the five-room modern bungalow at 1504 South Nineteenth street, formerly the home of W. C. Ring and family, and will move at a very early date. Mr. Bennington is employed at Highland Lawn cemetery. Fred Hodges, of Fox & Pfister, handled the deal.

NEW DEMING HOMES.

W. V. Haynes, of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, and Earl Haley, local hardware man, are building homes in Deming third sub. Both structures are well under way at the present time, and should be completed at an early date.

COLORED SWIMMING POOL NOW COMPLETE

City's Latest Recreation Place Will Open During Coming Week.

With the completion of the new colored municipal swimming pool at Thirteenth street and College avenue yesterday, Terre Haute comes into possession of another recreation place which places it out in advance of the other cities in this section of the country. The completion of the south side pool also means the opening up of a place of enjoyment for the colored population of the city which promises to be one of the most popular yet established here.

The pool itself is a beautiful creation, being of white concrete, 60x80 outside dimensions, the swimming space itself being 40x60, with depths ranging from three and one-half to seven and one-half feet. Ladders, spring boards and high dives constitute part of the equipment of the pool proper, while dressing rooms, shower baths and toilets have been provided for the use of the swimmers.

Entrance to the pool, which is located at the south end of one of the city's public parks, located at the site mentioned above, is from the north at the ground level.

Here the swimmers enter, receiving their towels and soap, the girls going to the left or east, and the boys to the right or west. Passing the long service counter, behind which there are 328 lockers for the safe keeping of the clothing of the swimmers, the patron enters a dressing room, returns his clothing to the locker assigned him, and then goes back through the dressing room to the toilets and shower baths, and from here up the south interior staircase to the promenade deck of the pool, which is a space 10 feet wide and extending around the whole enclosure. Entrance to the pool proper, and exit from the pool, by swimmers, is made at the south end, while exit and entrance to the lower portions, the dressing rooms, lockers, showers, etc., is at the north end.

In the girls' section individual dressing rooms have been arranged with steel partitions between, while in the men's section is one large room with benches.

Entrance to the toilets, the girls' in the northeast corner of the pool, and the men's in the northwest corner of the pool, may be made from the inside of the pool or from the outside, and will be available for the use of onlookers as well as the swimmers themselves.

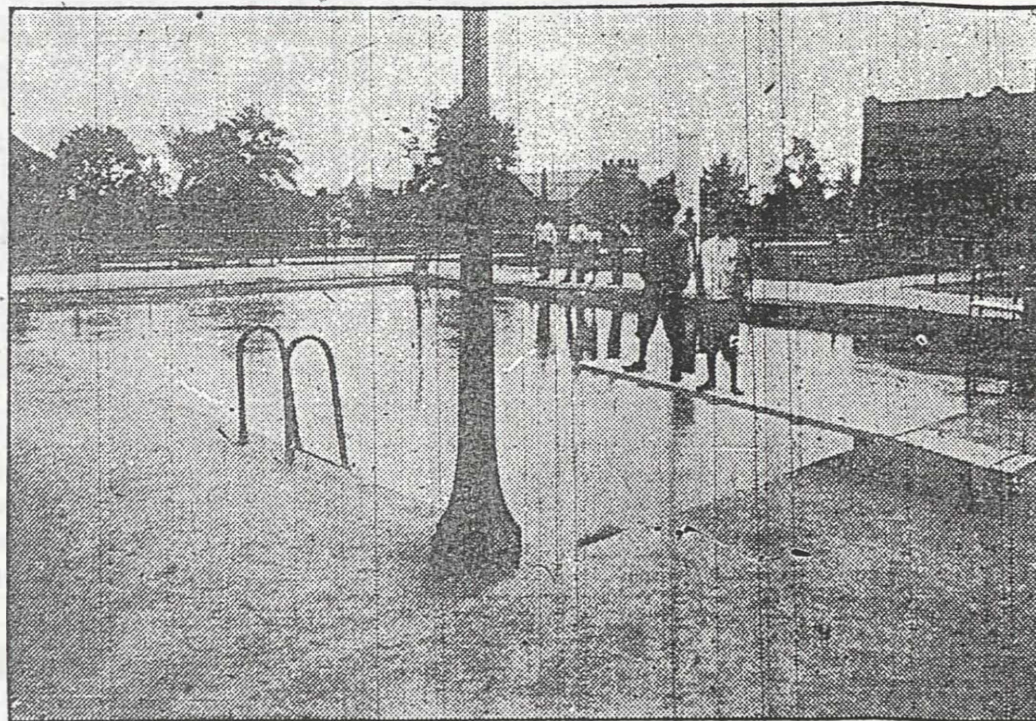

The pool is a distinct addition to the city's places of recreation, and with its opening during the coming week is expected to be widely attended.

The cost of the structure approximated $20,000. North-Raffin Construction company had the general contract, Johnson & Joslin had the plumbing, while Drelman Electric company had the electrical work.

BRASHEAR BUILDS ATTRACTIVE HOME

South Monterey Street Home Features the Spanish In Architectural Style.

The new home of Harley Brashear on South Monterey, just south of Ohio boulevard in Deming third sub, promises to be one of the most attractive homes in that section of the city when completed.

The Brashear home is pure Spanish, being of low massive construction, white stucco with red brick trim, and red tile roof, a porte corchie in red tile around the whole house and an open veranda porch at the front enclosed by a massive stucco balustrade topped with red brick.

Entrance is directly into the living room through an inset single door, located in a recessed archway. On either side of the central entrance, French windows also connect the front veranda with the living room.

Inside, on either side of the central entrance, is a guest coat closet, while at the south is a massive fire-place which lends comfort to the whole.

From the living room entrance is into the dining room through an arched opening, while on to the rear is the kitchen through a double-acting door. The kitchen is complete in every respect with built-in features, recessed outside-icing refrigerator, and a roomy breakfast nook.

The service hall also gives off of the dining room into the two bedrooms and the tiled bath and furnishing space for a linen closet. The

Municipal Recreation Places Keep Pace With Beautiful Residence Sections Here

H. A. Collins.
Terre Haute's municipal places of recreation seem to be very closely allied with the beautiful residence sections on the outskirts of the city, although which is the cause and which the result of the other is an open question.

Collett Park, which up to within the past few years, which have seen the advent of Deming, Rea and Fairbanks parks, was the popular gathering place for the populace of the city, would seem to indicate that residence sections here have followed the places of recreation, as when Collett park was established there were very few residences in that section of the city, while at the present time Collett Wood and Collett Park place boast some of the most beautiful homes of the community.

In the case of Deming park, however, the Stadium and Rea park, the reverse seems to be true, as these places were coming into prominence as residence sections before the recreational attractions in these sections had been established.

Edgewood Grove and Edgewood place were well under way before Deming park got started and before the Stadium had even been seriously thought of. The same was true in the south section of the city where Davis Gardens was well developed before Rea park got under way.

However, in both of these instances, the inauguration of these places of attractions has served to bring the sections in their immediate vicinity into even greater prominence, and now both residence sections are found in the act of enlarging and branching out. Davis Gardens has been the scene of many new homes in the past two years, and the section to the south and east of Rea park is now starting to bud out.

The same thing is true in the east-urn section where South Fruitridge avenue is the scene of a scramble for home sites, due in great part to the advent of the Stadium, and Deming park.

What result the opening of the swimming pool in Fairbanks park will have on the neighborhood in that section remains yet to be seen. That section of the city is one of the old residence sections. It is one, however, which has not been cared for as some of the others have and is therefore in a more or less run down condition.

It would not be surprising, however, in the near future to see the start of a newer neighborhood in that section, a brightening up of the home sites, and a beautifying in general of the neighborhood. These two activities seem naturally to go hand in hand. Where there is recreation there is certain to be a more or less general demand for close-in home-sites, and where there is a well regulated residence section there is certain to be a place of recreation near at hand. Each seems to be necessary to the other.

Residents.

Booker T. Washington park, a 5.32 acre tract located two miles southeast of the business district at Twelfth street and College avenue, is the only exclusive colored park in Terre Haute.

Situated in the heart of the city's largest colored district, Washington is probably one of the busiest and most frequented parks in this vicinity. All kinds of recreational facilities and sports equipment are available for use by the colored residents of the city at Washington park, including a swimming pool which last year was operated without charge.

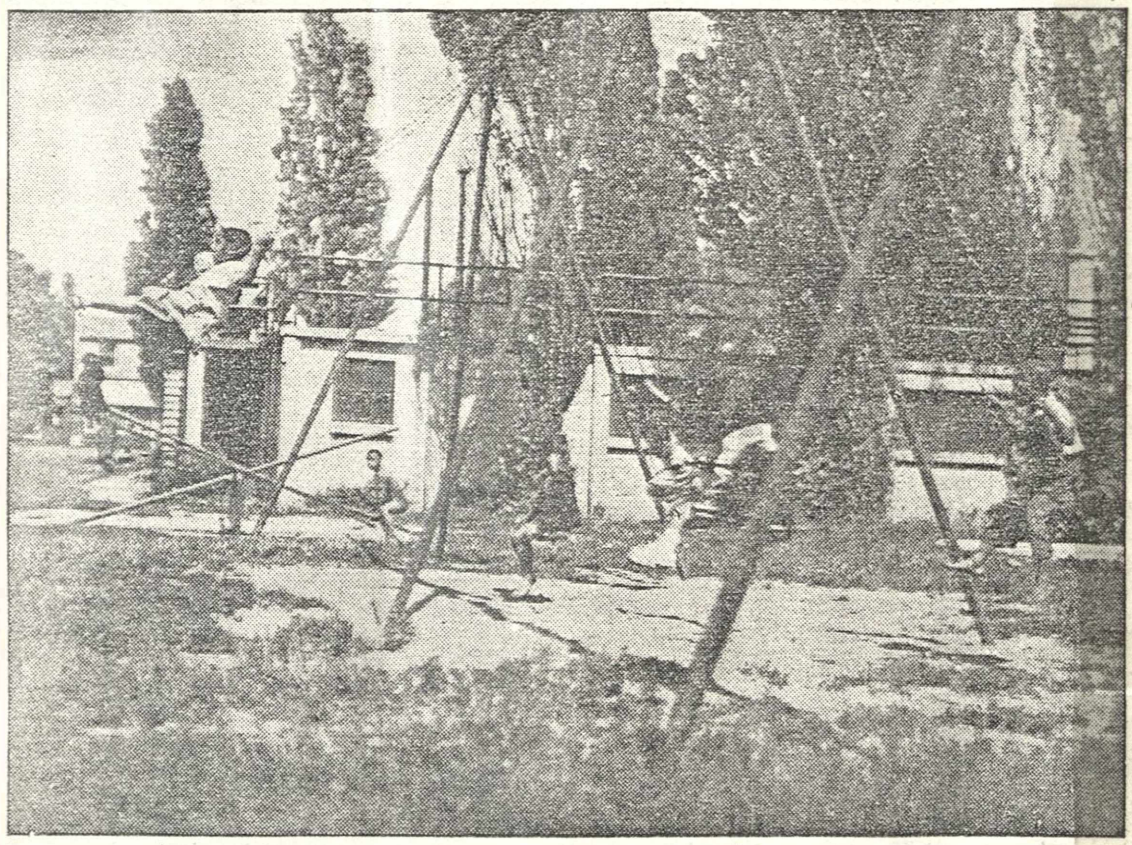

Every summer attendance records are smashed at Washington park, and the place this year is expected to be more popular than ever before. A custodian and a matron are employed at the park throughout the summer months, as well as other employees essential to the park's maintenance.

Not only does Booker T. Washington park have more attendance than any park its size in the city, but it also offers more advantages than other parks of similar dimensions. Last year a successful Learn to Swim Week was conducted at the
